About Me

I am a rising star in the coding world, originally from Kenya, born and raised. I have been in the seattle area for the past 8 years, my hobbies include; hiking, investing, meditating and interior designing. What I appreciate most about the northwest is the architectural landmark.

I am a graduate student from University of Washington with a bachelors degree in Law, Economics and Public Policy. I currently work in the aerospace industry as, a logistics specialist at the Boeing company in Mukilteo. My interest in coding emerged from a series of experiences while connecting and interacting with friends who are developers in different tech industries.
